Give Your Staff the Power of Support
Let no support question go unanswered. Give your staff access to the very best in technical support for a concise flat rate.

The traditional business telephone solution is showing its age. In lieu of the Internet and online technologies like the cloud, organizations are finding it difficult to justify keeping a traditional phone line for their communications solutions. Considering how difficult it is to scale a traditional PBX phone system to accommodate for growth, businesses want a more dynamic solution that's in line with their current, and future, needs.

With a cloud VoIP solution from Clearmind Technology, Inc., your business can finally cut expensive telephone services out of your budget, and replace them with flexible solutions designed to address your organization's communications needs. By taking advantage of a service that you already use - the Internet - to secure the communication platforms your company requires while removing unnecessary service costs.

Reduced Communications Expenses
Say goodbye to expensive telephone services.

Telephone service providers will often bundle services together in an attempt to make more money and to provide consumers with the opportunity to get more for their money. The "cost savings" may not turn out to be valuable, however, as your business might not use all the services the package provides. With cloud VoIP, you get exactly what you pay for - no more, no less. This helps you build a solution to best align with the specific needs of your business.

Adjustable for Growth
Easily add users, extensions, and phone lines.

The traditional PBX phone system is often difficult to work with, especially if your organization is experiencing significant growth. With a cloud VoIP solution, your phone infrastructure is much more dynamic and new users can be added easily. You don't have to lay new phone lines or remodel your office every time you add users.

Fully-Hosted and Maintained
You worry about your business — we'll worry about your phone system.

Managing and maintaining a telephone system can be complex and difficult, especially if you already have other priorities, such as managing your day-to-day business operations. Small businesses often don't have the staff on-hand to take proper care of their technology solutions, including a hosted communications solution. Clearmind Technology, Inc. can provide the care needed to ensure that you get the most out of your telephone system, while maximizing uptime.
